

College Menu Options

Authors: Daniel Miller, Joey Missan, Colin Mitchell, Yutai Yang

Problem Statement:

At school campuses, certain restaurants often change what they offer, without having a public menu available. This leads to students having to guess where to eat in order to have a healthy and varied diet. The stagnation of meals and lack of variety in diet is not only unhealthy, but the time spent eating with friends becomes boring and almost a chore. College students need an easy and efficient way to discover the options on the menus of each campus diner because many students often eat the same food every week without knowing the choices of other dining locations. Our solution will provide college students with those necessary healthy options.

Who is experiencing the problem?

All college students that aim to eat healthily struggle finding these options on campus.

What is the problem?

There is no easy way to find out what items a restaurant offers without visiting.

Where does the problem present itself?

The problem presents itself in a college dorm room where the student is deciding what to eat. This is for UofSC in particular, but the problem can occur at all college campuses.

Why does it matter?

The health of students contributes greatly to their experience and education, so staying healthy is a must. For students, many people need a healthy eating habit, especially athletes or people who enjoy staying active and need to keep a regular intake of nutrition every day.
